ENGAGING THE PLANO COMMUNITY SINCE 1982

BY REBECCA SILVESTRI (HTTPS://PLANOPROFILE.COM/AUTHOR/REBECCA/) / MAY 17, 2017

NEW AND AFFORDABLE ASSISTED LIVING AND MEMORY CARE COMMUNITY BEGINS CONSTRUCTION IN SACHSE

Bringing its fifth senior living community to Dallas/Fort Worth, Dallas-based Mustang Creek Estates is announcing construction of a 42,000-square-foot, $7.5 million dollar assisted living and memory care community in Sachse. As an affordable residential-style community, Mustang Creek Estates of Sachse will have six uniquely designed homes. Up to 16 seniors will live in each home in a friendly, loving and engaging environment with a flexible schedule so they can continue living as they did at home. The focal point of each home in the neighborhood will be the open kitchen, where residents can see their food being prepared from scratch and smell the aromas of home-cooked, delicious meals. Residents will receive personal assisted care and enjoy participating in enriching and fulfilling daily activities in their home and in other homes throughout the community. The homes will face a greenspace and walking path which will give residents many opportunities to spend time outdoors and gain an overall sense of well-being. The community will create 50 jobs, and the well-trained, compassionate staff will provide high-quality care for 90 residents. The senior living community is now accepting reservations. They are expected to open in fall of 2017.

“We are thrilled to become part of the Sachse community, and we believe that our residents are true extensions of our own families,” said Renee Ramsey, CEO of Mustang Creek Estates. “The town of Sachse is growing fast, and we look forward to being a resource for local families and organizations. There is a real need for our affordable, residential-style assisted living and memory care community in Sachse. Residents will feel comfortable, engaged and at home because they can make their own schedules, participate in activities and spend time visiting with their neighbors. Each home in our community is designed to be warm, inviting and enriching to our residents, with all the comforts of home and at an affordable price.”

The intimate size allows staff to really get to know the residents personally. Mustang Creek Estates has found that its model creates bonds similar to the ones families share, and it leads to more individualized attention and care paid to each of its residents. As a result, deeper relationships develop in an extremely loving environment.

“This approach is like nothing else in Sachse, and we have seen the positive impact of this personalized style of care in all of our communities,” said Ramsey. “We’re looking forward to enhancing the lives of seniors and their families in Sachse.”

The community will sit on just over seven acres of land at 3900 Ranch Road in Sachse, across the street from Whitt Elementary School and a few minutes’ drive from the Firewheel Town Center. The community is designed by civil engineer Joseph E. Helmberger, P.E. of Kimley-Horn, a design consulting firm. The community’s architect is Scott Roberts of Creative Architects in Garland.
